WHY HE KNEW M'CORMACK

POLICE METHODS IN THE CUN-NINGHAM MURDER CASE.

Reeper in the Yorkville Prison Swenra that Capt, Martens Pointed Out Me-Cormack to the Boy Who Says He Saw Him Strangle the Girl-McCormack Heid. No new evidence sgainst Edward McCormack, who is charged with the murder of little Mary Cunnirgham, developed yesterday, but at the examination in the case, held in the Yorkville Police Court, young Joseph Marone, the Italian boy who claims to have seen McCormack strangling the girl, repeated the story he told the police on Tuesday afternoon in a straight-forward way that convinced many who heard him that he was telling the truth. The police admit that they have little corroborative evidence, and say that their case against Mo-Cormack will have to rest almost entirely on young Marone's story. They are now seeking witnesses whose testimony will show beyond a doubt that the boy was in the house at the time the murder took place. This fact established. the police think, any fair-minded jury will believe the lad's story.

The only persons who can testify to this are the little girl who ordered the ice from Marque's father, and in delivering which Marque says he stumbled into the Cuningham flat and saw Mc-Cormack strangling the girl; and a man who lives on one of the upper floors whom Marone questioned while looking for the person who had ordered the ice. Capt. Martens said yesterday that he thought he would be able to find the little girl, but had his doubts about finding the man, unless the latter, hearing that he is wanted, came forward voluntarily and offered his testimony. The Captain says that he knows the name of the girl who ordered the ice and that she lives in the house where the murder was committed. Since the arrest of McCormack, however, he says, she has been smuggled away and has not been seen in the neighborhood. He has a clue to her present whereabouts, however, he says, and thinks he can find her in a few

An interesting controversy has arisen between the police and the prisoner McCormack's law-yer. The latter declares that his client is the victim of persecution and that the police are trying to make a scapecoat of him. He says that the identification of McCormack at the Yorkville prison on Tuesday by the boy Marone was a farce from beginning to end, and in measure his charge is substantiated by the Warden of the prison and one of the keepers. The charge is that Capt. Martens took Marone to the prison before Inspector Brooks did, and had McCermack brought ont for inspection. The Captain, it is alleged, pointed at McCormack and said:

mane said that it was, Later on Inspector ooks brought the Italian to the prison and told him to walk around the cells and see if he could see in any of them the man whom he had seen strangling Mary Cunningham. The boy naturally picked out McCormack, and the latter's lawyer says that was the whole of the great identification of which the police have said so much.

The first man called at the examination in the Yorkville Police Court was young Farrell, who has been under arrest as a suspect from the first. Inspector Brooks told Magistrate Crane that there was no evidence against the man at all that his allbiwas complete, and suggested his dismissai. The Magistrate said that Farrell might so, and the youth lost no time in getting out. that his allbi was complete, and suggested his dismissai. The Mayistrate said that Farrell might go, and the youth lost no time in getting out.

When the case against McCormack was taken up the first witness called was John Farrell, who lives in one of the upper fats of the house at 315 East Thirty-seventh street. He said that he heard a great noise on the day of the murder, and went down stairs to see what it was all about. There some one told him that Mary Cuaningham had been murdered, and he stood on the stoop taking it over with a man named Carroll. While they were talking McCormack came out, and the witness asked Carroll who he was, suggesting that he ought to be watched. Carroll followed McCormack to Thirty-seventh sireet and Park avenue, and there caused his arrest.

Dr. William A. Tyler was next called. He went to the Cunningham flat in response to a Dr. Whilam A. Tyler was next called. He went to the Cunningham flat in response to a summons from a little girl, who toid him that Mary Cunningham had been killed, he said. He was accompanied by Dr. Sinsapaugh, and they made an examination of the premises. They found nothing startling and went out on the street, where they saw the policeman who had arrested McCormack bringing him back. That was the first he saw at all of McCormack, and a published statement that he said he had seen the man running away, he said, was false. Policeman Tarney and Capt. Martens then told the story of McCormack's arrest and of his being brought to the station house, and then young Marone, the prosecution's star witness, was called. The box seemed to enjoy the attention he was attracting immensely, and his face was wreathed in smiles when he mounted the stand.

"Now Joseph," said the Inspector. "tell the stand.

"Now, Joseph," said the Inspector, "tell the story of all you saw just as you told it to me Yesterday."
"Will you tell the truth?" asked Magistrate

"And do you know what an oath is?" asked Lawyer Fennell, who regresents McCormack. Marone tooked around uneasily, so Lawyer Fennell asked the Court to declare him incompetent to testify, on the ground that he knew nothing of the nature of an oath.

The Court overreited him, and then Marone went on and told the story as it appeared in yesterday's SUN. When on cross-examination the witness said that the door of the Cunningham kitchen opened from the left-hand side, the coursel for the defence declared that it opened just the other way, and that when open it shut off the view of all the flat save whaif of the kitchen.

off the view of all the flat save a hair of the kitchen.

When Inspector Brooks interpolated that the boy might have been mistaken in his statement. I awyer Fennell grew very much excited.

"That will do," he thundered. "This whole matter has been an outrage from the first, and I'll not stand by and let you make another Frenchy' case out of it."

The Magistrate rapped for order, and then Inspector Brooks took the witness in hand again. During the course of his examination the boy said that the girl and man were in the kitchen when he saw them. Lawyer Fennell took coplous notes at this point. Then he got the Magistrate to make the witness go over the story again. This done, he declared that it was a most astonishing statement, inasmuch as the girl's body had been found two rooms from the titchen. It didn't seem to occur to him that the tchen. It didn't seem to occur to him that the girl's body had been found two rooms from the kitchen. It didn't seem to occur to him that the bedy might have been dragged there after the girl was killed.

At this juncture Capt. Martens asked to be allowed, in view of criticisms which had been made, to tell how the man McCormack had been identified by Marone. Permission being granted, he said that he took the boy to the prison on Tuesday, and took him to Farrell's cell first, where he showed him Farrell and four other prisoners. Then he brought him down stairs and took him past the cells. The boy stopped at McCormack's cell, he said, and identified the man.

"Now are you sure you've stated what occurred correctly?" asked Lawyer Fennell.

"I am," responded the Captain.

"Well," said Fennell, "I a keeper of the prison came here and swore that you came to the jail, said nothing about the boy, but asked to see McCormack, took the boy straight to the cell, let him see him, and then asked him if that was the man, making no effort to see anybody give, would be be lying?"

"He would," replied Cant, Martens.

Then Lawyer Fennell called Patrick Galiagher, a keeper in the Yorkville prison, to the stand, and asked him to tell about the Captain's visit to the fail on Tuesday.

"The Captain came to the gate," said Gallagher, "and asked him to tell about the Captain's wisit to the pail on Tuesday.

"The Captain came to the gate," said Gallagher, "and asked to see McCormack. He told him that Farrell's cell was upabove, thinking he might want to see him, too. The Captain and went straight to, McCormack's cell. I could not hear what was said, but as the Captain walked out I remarked. "What did you find out?" and he replied. We've got the right party."

"Dad't tell you I wanted to take the boy in toidentify a prisoner?" asked Capt, Martens.

"You did not," replied to sallagher, "You said nothing shout identification."

"I just want to show how these reform police are trying to duplicate the Frenchy episode," out in Lawyer. Fennell.

"You did not." replied stallagher. "You said nothing about identification."

"I just want to show how these reform nolice are trying to duplicate the Frenchy episode," put in Lawyer Fennell.

Young Marone was put on the stand again at this point, and under cross-examination he admitted that he had seen McCormack walking along the street with a noticeman a few minutes after his arrest. He knew then, he said, that it was the man he had seen strangling the girl a short time before, but he said nothing because he was afraid of being arrested himself. Magistrate Crane, at the conclusion of the examination, said that there was nothing for him to do but to held McCormack without bail to swait the action of the Coroner. So McCormack was led back to Jail. When he got in there the following note from his wife was handed to him:

"Ed: Keep up your courage like a good man. God bless you. I know that you are innocent, and I pray for you always. L. McCormack."

MINISTER SAVED AFTER 31 YEARS.

Early in last week Bassett and the woman had trouble over the ownership of a bag of butternuts which were in the Trosler barn. Just after dinner on Sunday the woman left the house and went to the barn where the nuts were. She picked up the bag and started with it toward the house, intending to put it away in her room. She had walked about half the distance between the house and the barn when Bassett, who had followed her from the house, met her. They had some conversation in angry tones, and then the boy struck her with a stick. He hit her first on the head, and then about the shoulders. She fell to the ground, and Bassett jumped on her body. The woman acreamed, and a small girl who lives in the house ran to her assistance. The girl bit Passett on the arm, and he stepped beating Miss Wells long enough to knock her defender down. By this time the screams of the two had brought Mr. Tresler and several others out of the house, when Bassett saw help coming heran for a barn a quarter of a mile away, and hid urder the hay mow. He lay there until James Roeraked him out and arrested him. The injured woman was carried to her room and was attended by Mr. Tresler's physicians.

at the Hotel Brunswick, engaged him yesterday afternoon and ran up a bill of $2. Then she told him that she had only $1.00, and he caused her arrest.

In court Mrs. Sherman said her home was in Minnesota, and that she had plenty of money. On the day before, she said, she had had two glasses of wine for dinner, and she thought that the wine must have gone to her head. She offered to pay the cabman, so he did not press the compaint.

Mrs. Sherman then produced a large roll of bills and handed Morrissey $2. Then site select-ed a $5 bill and placed that in his hand. Mor-rissey smiled joyously. "Thank you, lady," said he; "pleased to serve you again,"

JERSEY CITY POLICE PRAISED. Editor Martin's Stolen Property Promptly Recovered.

Thomas H. Martin, the editor of Diric of Atlanta, Ga., thinks the police of Jersey City are clover men. On Tuesday evening, while he was walting in the Penns; Ivania Railroad depot in Jersey City to take the Southern express train, he laid his vallee, a case containing a dress suit, and his umbrella and came on a seat while he went over to the newspaper stand to pick out something to read on the trip. When he returned his goods had disappeared. A telephone message was sent to follee Headquarters, and Mr. Martin started off on the train, never expecting to hear of his stolen property again. When the train reached Trenton he found a despatch from Jersey City telling him that his nearly had been recovered. He returned to Jersey City and got it. Gerry Spelety's Protest Overruled. Corporation Counsel Scott made a ruling yesterday concerning the payment of city money to charitable institutions that receive children committed by City Magistrates. The city pays $3 a week each for such children, and the various institutions report every month to the Comptroller the number of children received, and this report is turned over to the Gerry society to be andited. That seelety recently reported against five boys received by the Catholic Protectory, and certain questions were raised which were referred to the Corporation Counsel. The first question was whether institutions receiving boys between 14 and 16 years old were entitled to receive money for them. The answer was that they were. The other question was whether boys committed as "ungovernable" could be received under the law, which specifies only "idle, triant, vicious, or homeless" children. Mr. Scott decided that "ungovernable" children should be included, and advised the Comptroller that the objection of the Gerry society would not stand. Comptroller the number of children received,

Sinking Fund Commission Opposed to Grant-ing the Bronz Park Site, The plan of the New York Zoological Garden Society to establish a garden in Bronx Park south of Pelham avenue, using 261 acres for the purpose, received a decided setback at the meeting of the Sinking Fund Commission yesterday. The application of the society for the and was made some time ago, and it was referred to Gen. McCook, Comptroller Fitch, and Alderman Olcott. Gen. McCook made a report yesterday. He said that there were many considerations that must be weighed. The first was the accessibility of the proposed site to the general public. He said that if the garden was located there it would be almost a mile from any transit point, and would undoubtedly cause a great deal of inconvenience to those wishing to go to the garden. Moreover, Gen. McCook reminded the members of the Sinking Fund Commission that the site proposed had cost the city
